About Divine Chocolate

Divine Chocolate is the only 100 percent Fairtrade chocolate company co-owned by cocoa farmers: the 85,000 members of Kuapa Kokoo Farmers Co-operative in Ghana. As owners, farmers get a share in the profits, a say in the company, and a voice in the global marketplace. With the extra income, farmers invest in their families, farms, and communities through projects that include women's literacy, schools, and model farm programs.

Shade grown, hand harvested, and slow fermented cocoa gives Divine Chocolate its unique flavor. It's exceptionally smooth, indulgently rich – and the perfect gift to give to any chocolate lover.

The Fair Trade Impact

Margret Fianko lives in Aduyaakrom in the western region of Ghana and has been a member of Kuapa for 13 years. She is a mother of three and shares a seven acre farm with her husband where the majority of land is dedicated to cocoa production. Margret says “the best thing about being a Kuapa member is that they assist women a lot,” something of which she is taking full advantage.

Being part of a women's group also means that Margret has received training in the production of liquid soap and screen printing; these serve as other income generating activities that can supplement the income she achieves from cocoa production.
